At the Commencement held on June 1 at the Academy of Music, the M.D. degree was conferred upon 143 graduates.

Charles Wilmer Wirts, Jr., of Pennsylvania, took residency training in medicine at the American Hospital in Paris. Upon returning to Jefferson he was appointed the first Ross V. Patterson Fellow in Gastroenterology (1940-42). He introduced the use of the Schindler gastroscope at Jefferson, and in 1946 became the Head of the Gastrointestinal Clinic as well as developing the first Division of Gastroenterology in the Department of Medicine (Fig. 265). He carried out significant research in gastroenterology along with an active clinical practice and served as President of the American College of Gastroenterology (1957) and of the American Gastroscopic Society (1959). His portrait was presented to the University in 1978.

Harold L. Israel, of Massachusetts, interned at the Philadelphia General Hospital where he received the Research Prize in 1936. He developed an interest in sarcoidosis which continued for more than 50 years during which he achieved a national and international reputation, attaining the rank of full professor at Jefferson. In recognition of his outstanding qualities as teacher, researcher and pulmonary clinician his portrait was presented to the University in 1984 (Fig. 266).

Joe Henry Coley practiced obstetrics and gynecology for more than 40 years in his native Oklahoma City and served as Clinical Assistant Professor in that specialty in the University of Oklahoma (Fig. 267). He served as an Alumni Representative on Jefferson's Board of Trustees (1972-79) and as Chairman of the Alumni Division of the Sesquicentennial Fund (1974). He was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Science by Jefferson in 1980, the Alumni Achievement Award in 1982, and the President's Cornerstone Award in 1984 (Fig. 461). His father was a Jefferson graduate in the Class of 1880 and had attended the lectures of Samuel D. Gross.

Members of the class who subsequently taught on the Jefferson Faculty were Louis Keeler Collins in Surgery (Proctology), Edward Joseph Moore, Jr. in Pediatrics, Floyd Johnson Putney in Bronchoesophagology, and Oscar Thompson Wood, Jr. in Medicine.

Board of Trustees Room in College Building

The 142 members of this class received their M.D. degrees on June 7 in the Academy of Music. It was destined to be the only occasion on which the new Board President Mr. Wilfred W. Fry would award diplomas, since his term of office was only eight months, limited by his death at age 60 of complications of pneumonia.

The top honor graduate of this class was John Aloysius McCormick, of Pennsylvania, who won six prizes in addition to the Alumni prize for the highest four-year academic average. After his internship, he shared the first Ross V. Patterson Fellowship in Obstetrics and Gynecology with his classmate Joseph Lawrence Finn. Both subsequently taught in the Department at Jefferson, but devoted their main energies to private practice (Fig. 268).

Hayward Russell Hamrick, of West Virginia, was promptly appointed to administrative posts at Jefferson. He served as Director of the Curtis Clinic from 1938 to 1957, but also as Medical Director from 1942 to 1957. His familiarity with all aspects of Jefferson affairs led to his appointment as Secretary of the Board of Trustees in 1943 and to the newly created position of Vice President of the Corporation in 1948. His clinical interest in the Department of Medicine was in cardiology (Fig. 269).

Peter Andrew Theodos, of Pennsylvania, became prominent in research and treatment of lung diseases in miners. He participated at the Barton Division of Jefferson Hospital in studies of relationships among lesions of silicosis, anthracosis, tuberculosis, and emphysema and described cavitating silicotic masses exclusive of the effects of tuberculosis. These studies made a significant contribution to preventive measures in all industries associated with dust inhalation (Fig. 270).

Charley J. Smyth, Alpha Omega Alpha at Jefferson, achieved national distinction in rheumatology and medical education (Fig. 271). He received the Jefferson Alumni Achievement Award for 1985, being cited for teaching, organizational and clinical skills, and publications. He was Professor of Internal Medicine at the University of Colorado and co-editor of five editions of Arthritis with Dr. Joseph Hollander. He was President of the American Rheumatism Association and the National Society of Clinical Rheumatology. He received numerous awards and citations including the prestigious Harding Medal of the Arthritis Foundation. He was made a Master of the American College of Physicians.

Edmund Llewellyn Housel, of Pennsylvania, won the prize in therapeutics at graduation and became a pioneer in geriatrics and hypertension at Jefferson. He served as a President of the Philadelphia County Medical Society and on the Board of Directors of Blue Cross and Blue Shield. The endowed Annual Edmund L. Housel Lectureship in Hypertension was initiated in 1981.

Ned Tyson Raker, of Pennsylvania, was an honor graduate who served as the first Resident in Surgery in Jefferson Hospital on the "A" service of Professor Thomas A. Shallow. He then went on to a successful clinical practice in South America.

Hyman Yaskin, of Pennsylvania, also an honor graduate, became a Clinical Professor of Neurology at Jefferson, and John Edward Lynch, of Pennsylvania, became a Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology in his alma mater.

Education is the best provision for old age.

Aristotle (384-322 B.C.)

The degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred upon 133 graduates by Mr. Robert P. Hooper, the new President of the Board of Trustees who would serve until 1949 and with change of title would be the first Board Chairman (1949/50).

J. Edward Berk, Distinguished Professor of Medicine and Chairman of the Department of Medicine at the University of California, received the Jefferson Alumni Achievement Award in 1977. His leadership in the field of gastroenterology was nationally recognized through his research accomplishments, authorship of medical publications and as a member of four editorial boards. He was President of the American College of Gastroenterology and the Bockus International Society of Gastroenterology. In 1989 he received the Clinical Achievement Award of the American College of Gastroenterology (Fig. 272).

Leonard W. Parkhurst began a lifetime relationship with Pennsylvania Hospital with his internship. He became a Founder and for 23 years Director of the Benjamin Franklin Clinic at Pennsylvania.

John T. Millington, Jr. became a public health physician and in later years served as Regional Health Commissioner with the Department of Health of Pennsylvania. For a time he was on the teaching staff at Jefferson as Visiting Professor of Preventive Medicine.

Four members of this class, in addition to private practice, taught on the Jefferson Faculty as follows: David Naidoff in Ophthalmology, Marcel Sussman in Obstetrics and Gynecology, and both Nicholas Raphael Varano (Fig. 273) and Max Rosensweig in Urology.

Paul Regis Davidson became the first Surgical Resident in Jefferson Hospital on the "B" service of Professor George P. Muller. His further career was in community surgery in Pennsylvania.

Student Lounge in College Building

The 138 graduates of this class brought the total number to 16,313. Although outstanding members could be singled out in every graduating class since 1826, this one ranked high in the number attracted to academic medicine and prominence in later professional activities.

Abraham Edward Rakoff, of Pennsylvania, an honor graduate, became interested in gynecologic endocrinology in his student years. As early as 1940 he joined with Drs. Cantarow and Paschkis to form an endocrine outpatient facility, an endocrine laboratory, and an informal research group at Jefferson. With these associates he developed procedures for increasing the sensitivity of the pregnancy test, for the bioassay of pituitary and chorionic gonadotropins, and for the assessment of the pituitary-ovarian-adrenal function in infertility and hirsutism. Dr. Rakoff's academic and clinical reputation became world wide (Fig. 274). His portrait was presented to the College by the Class of 1964 and he received the Alumni Achievement Award posthumously in 1984.

Paul Applegate Bowers, of Pennsylvania, after specialty training at Chicago Lying-In Hospital and serving in World War II as Colonel, rose academically at Jefferson to Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology. As a respected teacher, author of many papers, and devoted Alumnus (President, 1973), his portrait was presented to the University in 1982. He was elected to two terms as Alumni Member of the Board of Trustees in 1984 and among many other honors received the Winged Ox Award of Thomas Jefferson University in 1985 (Fig. 275).

John Joseph O'Keefe, of Pennsylvania, after his internship at Jefferson Hospital, received the Ross V. Patterson Fellowship in Bronchoesophagology. After World War II service he continued through the academic ranks until appointed Chairman of Otolaryngology in 1973. His organizational memberships were legion and he authored many papers, including the development of bronchoscopy at Jefferson (Fig. 276).

Members of the class who became respected teachers and clinicians at Jefferson were: John Francis Wilson (Dermatology, Fig. 277), John Joseph Duncan (Plastic Surgery), Basil Giletto (Obstetrics and Gynecology), John Molyneux Flumerfelt (first Resident in Psychiatry), Louis Merves (Cardiology), Daniel Wilner (Radiology), and Irwin Jack Pincus (Physiology).

Bernard Benjamin Zamostein, of Pennsylvania, became a Charter Diplomate of the American Board of Family Practice. He served for over 50 years as a practitioner, teacher (Family Medicine at Jefferson), researcher, and humanitarian. He received the first Practitioner of the Year Award of the Philadelphia County Medical Society in 1974 and its 1988 Cristol Award for significant contributions to the goals of organized medicine.

Everett Julius Gordon, of Washington, D.C., served as Clinical Associate Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery in Georgetown University School of Medicine as well as Chief of Orthopaedic Surgery in several of the leading hospitals. He was awarded the Maimonides Medal of the Antidefamation League in Washington, D.C. in 1987.

Robert Clifton McElroy, of West Virginia, was a Clinical Associate Professor of Obstetrics at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine and was prominent on the staff of the Pennsylvania Hospital.

Robert S. Garber became a widely-known New Jersey psychiatrist following his war-time service as Lieutenant Colonel in the United States Army. He went on to a career in clinical psychiatry and later was named Visiting Associate Professor at Rutgers University School of Medicine and at Jefferson Medical College. He received numerous awards including the first Mt. Airy Foundation Award, Denver, Colorado in 1971.

Bronchoscopic Ward care in Thompson Annex.

Among the 134 graduates a major prize winner, William W. L. Glenn, pursued an academic career in surgery. Following World War II he completed residency at Jefferson and went on to appointment at Yale University School of Medicine where he progressed to Professor of Surgery with many publications and research activities in cardiothoracic surgery. He was President of the American Heart Association in 1971 and received the Jefferson Alumni Achievement Award in 1973. On retirement he was named Charles S. Ohse Professor Emeritus and Senior Research Scientist at Yale (Fig. 278).

R. Howard Lackay trained at Walter Reed Hospital, Jefferson, and at Graduate School of Medicine of University of Pennsylvania. As a career officer, he served in Preventive Medicine and Aviation Medicine. During the immediate post-war period he was assigned to Jefferson as Professor of Military Science and Tactics.

John J. DeTuerk, following wartime service, returned to Jefferson to complete his surgical residency, then joined the staff in surgery. He succeeded his mentor, Dr. George Willauer (JMC, '23, Fig. 227) as Director of Surgery at Methodist Hospital, Philadelphia, while advancing to Clinical Professor of Surgery at Jefferson (Fig. 279).

Victor P. Satinsky practiced cardiothoracic surgery at Hahnemann Medical College Hospital with numerous research accomplishments. At retirement he organized the Satinsky Institute for Human Resource Development for educational achievement and rehabilitation of young people with special problems.

J. Woodrow Savacool became associated with the Pulmonary Division at Jefferson, first as Joseph V. Horn Fellow and advanced to Clinical Associate Professor of Medicine. He was also appointed Associate Professor of Preventive Medicine and directed the Health Maintenance Clinic for ten years. He was a consultant in pulmonary diseases for the Philadelphia Department of Health. In later years he aided in editing Thomas Jefferson University: Tradition and Heritage (Fig. 280).

Alison H. Price, an early resident in medicine at Jefferson, joined the staff as Ross V. Patterson Fellow. He was closely associated with Professor Hobart A. Reimann in major clinical and academic work. He advanced to Associate Professor of Medicine but resigned in the early 1960's to establish the Price Clinic (Fig. 281).

Woodrow W. Lindenmuth, trained in surgery at Pennsylvania Hospital, then went on to an appointment as Chief of Surgery at New Haven Veterans Administration Hospital and as Professor of Surgery at Yale University School of Medicine.

George A. Silver was with the United States Public Health Service and was affiliated academically with Johns Hopkins and Columbia Universities with final location at Yale University as Professor of Public Health (International Health).

Wilfred I. Carney, longtime surgeon in Providence, Rhode Island, also served as Clinical Assistant Professor of Surgery at Brown University School of Medicine.

Morris J. Shapiro went on to a career in surgery, associated with Strong Memorial Hospital and the University of Rochester, New York, as Associate Professor of Surgery. His many community activities in Upstate New York were especially notable.

Paul Chodoff was trained in psychiatry at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, D.C. and remained there to practice psychiatry and psychoanalysis. He became Clinical Professor of Psychiatry at Georgetown University School of Medicine and was also President of the American Academy of Psychoanalysis.

Albert M. Biele was for many years a practicing psychiatrist affiliated with Jefferson and numerous other Philadelphia institutions. He advanced to Clinical Professor of Psychiatry and Human Behavior at Jefferson.

Victor Mayer proceeded to a full career in orthopaedic surgery with many associated consulting posts in the New York area. He was for many years Assistant Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery at Cornell University School of Medicine and Associate Attending Surgeon at New York Hospital and the Hospital for Special Surgery.

Norman W. Henry, Jr. was Pathologist to St. Joseph's Hospital and for many years Assistant Professor of Pathology at Jefferson.

Martin Green was trained in pediatrics and allergy. He became Chairman of Pediatrics at Atlantic City Medical Center, also holding an appointment in Pediatrics at Jefferson with the rank of Assistant Professor.

William I. Heine, cardiologist and Senior Attending Physician at Einstein Medical Center was also Clinical Professor of Medicine at Temple University School of Medicine.

At the Commencement held June 2 at the Academy of Music, Mr. Robert P. Hooper conferred the M.D. degree upon 122 graduates. The Honorable Arthur H. James, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, gave the Address and received an honorary LL.D. degree.

John Hendricks Hodges, of West Virginia, an honor graduate, went on to a distinguished career at Jefferson in teaching, research and clinical practice. From 1944 to 1972 he directed the student course in Clinical Laboratory Medicine. He worked with Professor Hobart A. Reimann in the first elucidation of a viral etiology for both pneumonia and gastroenteritis. In 1964 he was appointed the first Ludwig A. Kind Professor of Medicine and from 1968 to 1978 was Director of the Division of Internal (General) Medicine. He was also an Associate in the Division of Hematology (Fig. 282). On two occasions the students dedicated their Clinic Yearbook (1951 and 1962) to him. Dr. Hodges served for two terms as Alumni Member on the Board of Trustees (1978 to 1984) and was selected by the Board to continue in an emeritus status as the only Alumnus ever to be so honored. He served as President of the Alumni Association (1972), Acting Chairman of the Department of Medicine (1976), and his portrait was presented to the University in 1981. The Alumni Association honored him with its Achievement Award in 1990.

Joseph Medoff, of Pennsylvania, another honor graduate, became an outstanding teacher and clinician in gastroenterology at Jefferson, rising to the rank of Clinical Professor (Fig. 283). He was twice the recipient of the Lindback Award for distinguished teaching (1967 and 1971) and was Faculty Advisor to the Hare Medical Society for 16 years (1960-76). In appreciation the Hare Society members presented his portrait to the University in 1976.

Three other members of this class subsequently became prominent on the Jefferson Faculty, namely Joseph Pote Long, Clinical Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology (Fig. 284), Paul Fried (Obstetrics and Gynecology), and James Byron Carty (Surgery).

Donald Worcester Bortz became Regional Chairman of the American College of Physicians; Frederick Lee Byerly rose to Professor of Surgery at the University of Pittsburgh; Henry Arnold Shenkin was Head of Neurosurgery at the Episcopal Hospital of Philadelphia; William Luther White became Professor of Plastic Surgery at the University of Pittsburgh; and Claude Nash Herndon, Jr. was Chairman of Preventive Medicine and Genetics at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, North Carolina.

Leonard Philip Lang, an early Fellow in Pulmonary Physiology at Jefferson's Chest Department, went on to a leading role in pulmonary medicine in Wilmington, Delaware. He was later named Clinical Professor of Medicine at Jefferson through its affiliated hospital program.

At the Commencement for 125 graduates on June 7 at the Academy of Music, four honorary degrees were awarded. William Lyon Phelps, Ph.D., LL.D., Orator of Yale University, received a Doctorate of Civil Law and gave the Address entitled "The Art of Living." Other awards were the LL.D. to Thomas Sovereign Gates, Ph.D., LL.D., President of the University of Pennsylvania; the Sc.D. to James Carre Magee, M.D. (JMC, '05), Surgeon General of the United States Army; and LL.D. to Robert Poole Hooper, President of the Board of Trustees of the Jefferson Medical College.

Herbert Alfred Luscombe, Jr., of Pennsylvania, an honor graduate, served his internship at Jefferson Hospital, and, after returning from service in World War II, devoted the rest of his professional life to dermatology at Jefferson. In 1959 he was appointed to the Chairmanship of the Department. Under his direction a modern Department evolved with a fully accredited three-year residency program. By 1986, 35 residents had been trained and the Luscombe Club was formed. Dr. Luscombe served as President of the Alumni Association in 1971 and his portrait was presented to the University in 1977. His excellence in teaching was recognized nationally when he received the Clark W. Finnerud Award for Teaching from the Dermatology Foundation in 1981. In 1983, the Herbert A. Luscombe Lectureship was established to bring distinguished dermatologists to Jefferson, emphasizing the role of progress in other institutions. At his retirement from the Chairmanship in 1986, Dr. Luscombe had served for 27 years for the longest term of leadership of any Dermatology Department in the United States (Fig. 285).

Thomas Burritt Mervine, another honor graduate, was appointed Instructor in Anesthesiology in the Department of Surgery at Jefferson in 1944 and served in that capacity until 1953. He was the first to use intravenous pentothal at Jefferson, to institute routine intravenous infusion at the start of surgery, and he performed many of the early endotracheal intubations. He also worked closely with Dr. William T. Lemmon in the early use of continuous spinal anesthesia. In the Surgery Department, Dr. Mervine was outstanding in his knowledge of the surgical literature and rose through the academic ranks to Clinical Professor. He served as President of the Alumni Association in 1980 (Fig. 286).

Ray Winfield Kehm went on to surgical training at the Cleveland Clinic. He established his practice in York, Pennsylvania, where in 1965 he became Chairman of the Department of Surgery at York Hospital. In 1982 he published an autobiography entitled The Birth of a Surgeon.

William John Snape, of New Jersey, taught in Jefferson's Department of Physiology and carried out research in gastroenterology. In later years he conducted an active clinical practice in New Jersey.

Gaetano Brindisi, taught in Jefferson's Department of Medicine and became Chief of Medicine in Saint Mary's Hospital, Philadelphia.

*The heights by great men reached and kept
 Were not attained by sudden flight.
 But they, while their companions slept,
 Were toiling upward in the night.*

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow
 (1807–82)

This year marked the entry of the United States into World War II with the bombing of Pearl Harbor by the Japanese on December 7. Forty-three members of this class of 120 had taken training in the Reserve Officers training corps during their four years and at graduation, in addition to their M.D. degrees, also received a certificate of Lieutenancy in the Reserve. Four out of the 102 class members who served would make the supreme sacrifice of their lives in the global conflict.

A stirring address was delivered by John M.T. Finney, M.D., LL.D. who spoke on The True Province of the Doctor. He had been a protege of Dr. William Stewart Halsted at Johns Hopkins, was Emeritus Professor of Surgery at Hopkins, and was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters by Mr. Robert P. Hooper, President of the Board.

John Y. Templeton, III, an honor graduate, was the first surgical resident to work with Dr. John H. Gibbon, Jr. in the laboratory at Jefferson. Following appointment to the Faculty in 1950 his academic rise was meteoric to Samuel D. Gross Professor of Surgery and Chairman of the Department (1967). He was a pioneer in the establishment of clinical cardiac surgery at Jefferson. He published more than 80 articles on a wide spectrum of surgical subjects and held membership in 50 professional organizations, serving in official positions in 14 of these. He became President of the Laennec Society, Pennsylvania Association for Thoracic Surgery, Philadelphia Academy of Surgery, Philadelphia County and Pennsylvania State Medical Societies, and Meigs Medical Association. At Jefferson he served as President of the Medical Staff and of the Alumni Association (1976). The Templeton Lectureship was established in 1980 and in the same year his portrait was presented to the University. He received the Jefferson Alumni Achievement Award in 1981. In 1987 Davidson College, his undergraduate alma mater, awarded him the Sc.D. degree and Jefferson later that year the LL.D. He was elected to serve on Jefferson's Board of Trustees as Alumni Representative (1989), and became "a legend in his own time" (Fig. 287).

Frederick B. Wagner, Jr., also an honor graduate, taught Anatomy at the Daniel Baugh Institute (1942-46) and served as a Ross V. Patterson Fellow in Surgery. Following service as a private assistant to Thomas A. Shallow, the Samuel D. Gross Professor of Surgery, he rose to Clinical Professor of Surgery by 1955, served as acting Chairman of Surgery in 1977, and became the Grace Revere Osler Professor of Surgery in 1978. In the latter year his portrait was presented to the University. He was a founding member of the International Society for Cardiovascular Surgery, and among his many professional organizations served as President of the Philadelphia Academy of Surgery (1986). In addition to more than 50 scientific articles Dr. Wagner co-authored a textbook on Preoperative and Postoperative Care (1947) and published The Twilight Years of Lady Osler (1985). A surgical library in the University Hospital was named in his honor by the residents, and in 1987 he received the Dean's Medal for dedicated service to the College. He served as President of the Alumni Association (1975) and was elected an Alumni Representative to the Board of Trustees in 1985. Appointed the University Historian in 1984, he edited Thomas Jefferson University: Tradition and Heritage published in 1989. He received the Alumni Achievement Award in 1990 (Fig. 288).

Paul J. Poincard served in World War II in the South Pacific as a Flight Surgeon and received five battle stars. He then pursued a distinguished career devoted to both general psychiatry and psychoanalysis at Jefferson, where he served as Acting Chairman (1961-1962). Dr. Poincard was the first psychiatrist to be elected as President of the Thomas Jefferson University Hospital Staff (1979-1981) and he served for many years on its Executive Committee. He became President of the Philadelphia Psychiatric Society, the Pennsylvania Psychiatric Society, the Medical Club of Philadelphia, the Jefferson Alumni Association during the Centennial (1970) of its founding, the Meigs Medical Association, and as the 120th President of the Philadelphia County Medical Society. After achieving Emeritus status in 1983, he continued as an active member of the Psychiatry Department, the Hospital, and the Alumni Association (Fig. 289).

Oscar Creech, Jr., of North Carolina, an honor graduate, became associated with the world-renowned Dr. Michael E. DeBakey in vascular surgery and made notable contributions in this field (Fig. 290). He also was a pioneer in the perfusion of malignant tumors of the lower extremities with chemotherapeutic agents. He went on to become Chairman of Surgery at the Tulane School of Medicine and also its Dean. His brilliant career was cut short by premature death at the height of his career.

Clyde C. Greene, Jr., of North Carolina, became a founding member of the American Society of Internal Medicine in 1956, its President in 1969/70, Editor of its National Magazine (1981-84), and co-author of its history, Aspirations and Achievements (1981).

As a war measure, President Robert P. Hooper in January of this year announced the decision of the Board to place Jefferson on an accelerated curriculum to provide 500 to 600 new doctors by 1945. At this time Dean Perkins confirmed that four academic years would be compressed to three chronologic years. The internship in Jefferson Hospital was concomitantly reduced from 27 to 12 months.

John Wallace Davis in this class of 131 won multiple prizes at graduation and followed in the footsteps of his illustrious father (Professor Warren B. Davis, JMC, '10, Fig. 179) in plastic surgery at Jefferson. After spending the years 1943 to 1946 as a Major in the Medical Corps in the China-Burma-India Theater during World War II, he returned to Jefferson for training under his father. As one of the pioneers in cosmetic surgery, he was one of the original proponents of psychologic good health (Fig. 291). He gained national recognition in his specialty and served as a Director and Board Trustee of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery. In addition to service as Chairman of Alumni Annual Giving at Jefferson for more than 27 years he received Jefferson's prestigious Cornerstone Award in 1978 (Fig. 443).

Willis Edmund Manges, an honor student, joined Jefferson's Radiology Staff in 1945, following the family tradition initiated by his father, Willis F. Manges (JMC, '03, Fig. 157), who had been the First Head of the Department of Roentgenology (1904-36). He subsequently went on to become Head of Radiology at the Methodist Hospital in Philadelphia and completed his professional career there.

Joseph John Rupp devoted his academic career at Jefferson to the field of endocrinology and oncology, rising to the rank of Professor of Medicine (Fig. 292). In 1961 he became Director of the Division of Endocrine and Cancer Research. His most intense area of interest was in disorders of the thyroid gland. Also in 1961, he, along with associates, initiated continuing medical education programs which led to a position in the Dean's office (1969) to further sponsor these programs. Dr. Rupp's portrait was presented to the College by the Class of 1969.

Joseph Webster Stayman, Jr., of West Virginia, took his Fellowship in thoracic surgery at Jefferson (1947/48) and became an Associate of Dr. John H. Gibbon, Jr. the following year. He played an important role in the teaching of Jefferson surgical residents who were assigned to Germantown Hospital and still later at Chestnut Hill Hospital where he became Chief of Surgery. He achieved the position of Clinical Professor of Surgery and subsequent Emeritus status.

Thomas M. Scotti, a maxima cum laude graduate of LaSalle College, was awarded the Alumni and Potter Memorial prizes. Following internship and pathology fellowship he joined the teaching staff of the Department of Pathology. He subsequently served at the Medical College of Virginia, the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology, and the University of Miami School of Medicine where he advanced to Professor of Pathology in 1957. Research in cardiovascular pathology and later in environmental toxicology led to his many publications. He was repeatedly honored at Miami for distinguished teaching.

George N. Stein became Professor of Radiology at the School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania.

Three other members of this class joined the Jefferson Faculty: Chester Brinley Bland in Obstetrics, Paul Kramer Perilstein in Medicine and Edward Kiefer Yantes in Medicine.
